It's Festival Time

After all, this is a freedom celebration, a time of deliverance

Three times a year it is required of God's people to have a feast/festivals (Heb. Chag). Chag (pronounced kha'wg) "feast," as defined by Strong's #2282, means "feast, festival, solemn feast day, sacrifice, solemnity," and comes from #2287, chagag "to keep a feast, to move in a circle, march in a sacred procession, observe a festival, celebrate, dance, keep a solemn feast." The Hebrew word chagag (kindred to the root chu'wg [hoog]) means to go round in a circle, hence--to dance, I Sa. 30:16. It also means to keep a festival, from the idea of leaping, and dancing in sacred dances, Ex. 5:1; Lev. 23:41; especially of a public assembly, Psa. 42:5; to reel, to be giddy, used of drunkards, Ps. 107:27.

Each festival (chag) has its appointed times (Heb. Moed), which are holy-days set aside for the purpose of worshipping God with praise, honor and thanksgiving. In turn God's meets his people at the altar and blesses all who keeps the appointment. The feast of unleavened bread is the first of the three feasts (chag) which are to be joyous celebrations of leaping and dancing. Some Christian celebrants may object, because they are used to the Passover being a very solemn occasion. God, on the other hand wants His people to rejoice. After all, this is a freedom celebration, a time of deliverance and great blessing. Come on Saints! Let's
